

TRAPPERS ARE BEING INVESTIGATED

State Game Warden Finds Many Mokena Trappers Licenseless

With the opening of the trapping season, game wardens are checking up on trapping licenses.

It is reported that there are many trappers in the Mokena territory, but so far only three trapping licenses are reported to have been sold.

This matter has come to the attention of the State Department of Conservation and as a result a game warden has been operating in Mokena this week, investigating why only three licenses have been issued, when there are so many trappers. All those trapping without a license had better get busy and procure same or else face arrest and fine for game law violations.

Musk rats are being caught for the most by trappers as muskrat pelts bring from $1.25 apiece and up and there is a good steady market for this class of pelts.

The Department of Conservation is carrying on a drive to strictly enforce all game laws and rulings all over the state.

Mokena Couple Married Sunday In Luth. Church

A quiet wedding took place in the Immanuel Lutheran church in Mokena Sunday afternoon, Nov. 29, at 4:30 o'clock when Miss Charlotte Geuther, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Geuther of Mokena and Robert Gilmore, son of Mrs. Elmer Sippel were united in marriage.

Only the immediate family, and near relatives were present. The pastor of the church, The Rev. Mr. W. J. Geffert performed the ceremony. The bride wore a gown of brown lace with hat and accessories to match and a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses. She was attended by her sister Ruth, who also wore a brown ensemble. Her shoulder corsage was also Talisman roses.

Mrs. Roy Barnes of New Lenox sister of the bride, played the wedding March. Mr. Clarence Geuther, brother of the bride attended the groom. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore went to their new home in Homewood, Ill., where they have furnished an apartment.

Mr. Gilmore is employed at the Ingalls-Sheppard Co., in Harvey, as billing clerk.

The many friends of this couple wish them much happiness.

Banks Ask For Reduction Of Tax Assessments

Twenty representatives of nine Will County banks met to formulate a protest to be presented today before the board of review when it meets in the court house.

The banks will ask for a reduction in their tax assessment and will be represented at the hearing by George J. Kiener, public accountant of Chicago. The banks will also ask for a uniform method of assessment applied to all the banks of the county.

The meeting of the representatives was held under the auspices of the Will County Bankers' association in the Louis Joliet hotel and was presided over by Lawrence J. Smith of the First National bank of Lockport, chairman of the bank association.

Other banks represented were the First National of Joliet, First National of Wilmington, New Lenox State, Mokena State, Frankfort State, First National of Manhattan, Peotone State and First State of Beecher.

The remaining two prizes will be posted in the member business places and the winner is given until 9 o'clock this Saturday night to claim it. This ruling will hold good every week until further notice.

New Lenox Couple Honored On Their Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gougar of New Lenox township, were entertained at a celebration in honor of their Golden wedding anniversary in the Marley church Saturday evening, November 28. About 100 guests were present to extend congratulations to this honored couple.

A feature of the evening, was a program which depicted various scenes and events in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Gougar. A mock wedding was also held which created much merriment.

A sumptuous dinner was served following the program. At the head table was seated the honored couple with their children, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gougar, Mrs. Myrtle Stout and a grandson, Mr. Thomas Stout and wife. The table was decorated with lighted candles at each end with a center piece of large chrysanthemum plant, the gift of relatives.

Also on this table was a pair of candle holders, 100 years old, which belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Isaac M. Gillett, grandparents of Mrs. Gougar.

All the tables were also decorated in keeping of the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Gougar were the recipients of a gift of money from the relatives and friends.

Plan Community Christmas Tree

Plans are afoot in Mokena for a Community Christmas tree and party. So far plans are just in the making and it is to be hoped that they will be carried out.

In addition to having a tree, the plans also call for a musical program in which the newly organized Mokena band will be featured.

Tinley Auxiliary To Hold Card Party

The American Legion Auxiliary of Tinley Park is sponsoring a card and buncio party for the benefit of their service Fund Thursday night, Dec. 17 at 8 p. m. in the school auditorium. A good time for all; fine prizes; refreshments and a door prize.

This fund is used for care of disabled veterans and welfare of the needy children. As long as men who were disabled in their country's defense are suffering and in need, and as long as children are living in deprivation because of a father's patriotic sacrifices to his country, our first purpose will be to aid those who gave health and strength for America, their wives and children. This is our great, unfinished task in which we are asking all to support by buying tickets and re-embursing our Service Fund.

Honored On 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harnack of Frankfort entertained in their home Sunday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Baumgartner and their 25th wedding anniversary. About 50 guests were present. The honored couple are the parents of Mrs. Harnack.

The evening was spent playing cards after which a buffet supper was served.

The dining room was lighted with white tapers. The dining table was decorated with white tapers and a large wedding cake graced the center of it. Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht, poured.

Mr. and Mrs. Baumgartner received many lovely gifts and greetings.

FRANKFORT RESIDENT DIES IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Elizabeth Waldvogel, 55 years old, who has resided for many years on a farm east of Frankfort, died Monday night in the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island after a lingering illness.

Mrs. Waldvogel was born in Homer township and lived there many years.

She is survived by her husband, John H. Waldvogel; two sons, George and Clarence; two daughters, Isabelle and Marion; two sisters, Mrs. Eugene Damm of Homer and Mrs. Jacob Kolar of Lemont; and five brothers, Peter and Nicholas Wies of Homer, John of Lockport, Michael of Westmont, Ill., and Matt Wies of Chicago and three grandchildren.

The funeral was held Thursday morning from the home at 9 o'clock to St. Mary's Catholic church in Mokena. Burial took place in St. Alphonsus cemetery in Lockport.

Band Concert At Mokena Draws Capacity House

A full house greeted the Frankfort and Mokena school band last Friday night at the Mokena auditorium when they appeared in a band concert.

The new fledging Mokena band of 30 members did remarkably well, playing three numbers, "America", "Lightly Rowing", "Abide With Me", and "Melody". Conductor Robert Wight, who has charge of both bands stated that the Mokena band group is doing remarkably well, having only been taking instructions for two months, whereas as a rule a new band is not able to appear in a band concert until they have played at least three or four months.

The Frankfort band made a very striking appearance in their fine blue and gold uniforms and played many difficult and novelty numbers, including overtures, marches and special arrangements with a real zest and charm.

The massed bands of Frankfort and Mokena played "America" which received a big hand.

Both bands have very promising futures and should be encouraged in every way. It is a benefit to a community to have a good live musical organization.

Home-made candy and pop corn was sold by the Mokena Band Association members parents and a neat sum was realized from this source. In all the concert was a most decided success, both from a social stand point and financially.

Roof Fire Endangers Orland Park Home

A roof fire threatened to destroy the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Powell in Orland Park Monday evening.

About 6 o'clock that evening Mr. Young and I. A. Cleveland discovered a tiny blaze on the shingle roof near a chimney. Mr. Powell was just getting in his automobile when the former told him his home was on fire. At first Mr. Powell thought his friends were joking, but quickly realized the seriousness of the situation.

The Orland Park Fire Department was summoned and arrived just in the nick-of-time as the entire roof burst into flames. Two streams of water were soon played on the roof and Fire Chief John Helenhouse and members of the fire department fought the blaze in the attic with chemicals. The fire was extinguished in short order. The damage was estimated at about $400, fully covered by insurance.

An entire new roof had to be placed on the building, work being started Thursday morning. A canvas was placed over the roof after the fire.

During the blaze, J. F. Schmaedeke was knocked from a stairway and injured a leg.

The dwelling which is owned by Dr. W. S. Schussler is located next door to the Oelke Bros., garage on Beacon street.

MOKENA NOW REQUIRES CASH WATER DEPOSIT

The Mokena Village Board at their meeting held Tuesday evening passed a new water rate ordinance.

This ordinance provides that the charge for water measured and registered by meters shall be 27 cents per 1000 gallons for the first 26,000 gallons; 22 cents per 1000 gallons for the next 20,000 gallons and 17 cents per 1000 gallons for all water used in excess of 46,000 gallons.

The minimum charge for water consumed shall be $1.75 for a term of three months.

The ordinance also provides that meters hereafter be thoroughly sealed so as to prevent any tampering with meters.

If access is refused to any village official or employee to read or inspect meters, the supply of water will be cut off without further notice.

In order to eliminate losses of water bills unpaid left by tenants who move out of the village, any applicant desiring to be supplied with water by the Village of Mokena, in any building, house or other premises shall, in addition to all other charges required to be paid, deposit with the Village Clerk the sum of $5.25 to be retained by the village as a guarantee for the payment of all water rates or charges thereafter accruing against such applicant for water furnished by the village, said sum of $5.25 to be returned by the Village Clerk to such applicant upon the village ceasing to furnish water to such user, providing that all bills rendered for water used up to the time the village ceases to supply water shall have been paid, the village having the right to deduct any unpaid water rents or charges from such deposit.

NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.
 Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging, tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."
 Don't be a three-quarter wife! Take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

"Not going out?"
 "I'm staying in town."
 "Stayin' in town?" stammered Bull, vastly surprised.
 "Drive me to the hotel," Jane said wearily. "I'll take a room there. You drive home and come back for me tomorrow afternoon."

It was ten o'clock. Assigned to a room, Jane freshened herself after the long, dusty car ride, bathed her face and temples again and again in cold water, and tried to collect her throbbing thoughts.

It all seemed like a hideous dream. Surely it could be shaken off; surely men could not be so fiendish as to plot fire and so horrible a death as would follow to sleeping men.

Her father! She shuddered. This thought was most horrible of all—incredible—and yet . . .

Of one thing she felt certain: If it were true, she could no longer live under the same roof with him, and the terrifying duty of learning the revolting truth from his own lips confronted her.

And her lover—Bill, blinded Bill—what now of him? Could she ever face him again? What would he say? What would he do?

He knew the truth. No doubt remained in her mind on that point. No need now to ask why he seemed worried and changed. Was he only waiting, trying to decide how to tell her he could not marry her—that her father had blinded him—that they must part?

She threw open her window and kneeling before it, looked out upon the silent, far-stretching desert with its myriad of heavenly lights. The cool air cleared her head. But what could loosen the deadly grief and shame that clutched at her pounding heart?

When Dr. Carpy walked into his office from the dining room after breakfast next morning, he saw Jane Van Tassel standing before the window, looking out.

"Why, Jane!" he exclaimed. "What brings you here so early?"
 She looked around at him in silence. The doctor walked over to her and laid his hands on her shoulders. "Jane," he asked, "what has happened, girl?"

The grief in her sunken eyes was too apparent.

"Oh, Doctor!" The exclamation came like a burst of suffering long pent. "I know everything."
 He saw the fat was flatly in the fire. Indeed he had long had only a faint hope of keeping the facts from Jane. His real hope had been that she might not hear the truth till he could save Denison's eyes and thus cushion the horrid shock that the facts must bring to an innocent sufferer.

She had thrown her arms on the table in front of her. Her head sank between them.
 Dr. Carpy rose, walked around to her side, lifted her head and, standing beside her, supported it in his arms. "Jane," he said slowly, looking down into her pitiful eyes, "from what you tell me, I see that you have heard loose stories floating around."

"You, too, have heard them, Doctor. Why, oh, why didn't you tell me?"

"Jane!" exclaimed the doctor, driven from his last stronghold of reserve by the poignancy of her grief. "How the hell could I tell you a story involving those it did in such an affair? Actually, nobody knows just what the facts are. Now we must get started right. First you tell me all you heard. Then I'll tell you all I've heard—is that fair?"

Brokenly, and pausing at intervals to control her voice, Jane gave him the train story.

Carpy had bowed his head.

"Well," he commented as she looked soberly up, "that's not far from what I've been told myself. But, Jane, I'm not a bit sure we have the facts in these stories. They all depend on the word of one of the worst characters in this country. Barney Rebstock wouldn't hesitate at anything low down in the whole range of crime—anybody in town will tell you that. He's not only an ex-convict but the biggest liar in this whole country."

"Doctor," she said solemnly, "does Bill know all that you and I know?"

"Jane," he answered in like, "Bill knows all that you and I know."

"Oh, I knew it. I knew it. To think that poor I should have brought this horror into his life!"

"Jane, that's not so. This might all have happened if you never had seen this country."

"I want you to do one last favor for me, Doctor. Will you?" asked Jane.

"What is it, Jane?"

"I want you to say to Bill that I freely release him from his promise of marriage; that I beg him to forgive me all I have innocently caused him to suffer—and that I will leave here forever."

"Jane!" exclaimed her listener. She raised her hand, "I've not finished yet."

"Go on!" he snapped, bluntly.
 "My father has made me his heir to Gunlock ranch; he has no other heir. This morning I will make my will and bequeath whatever I inherit from my father to William Denison, to atone as far as I can for the wrongs my father has done him."

"Well?" remarked Carpy coldly.
 "That is all."
 "And that is what you want me to tell Bill?"
 "That, Doctor, is what I want Bill to know. Oh, if I had another to do it for me, dear Doctor, I wouldn't put it on you."

Carpy rose to his feet.
 "Jane, you're sending me on a fool's errand. But seeing I'm nothing but an old fool, I expect I'm just the man for the job. I can tell you now what he'll say as well as if I'd seen him and given him your message. But I know, of course, that wouldn't satisfy you. So I'll go—and go now."

"Now promise," he repeated, in parting, "you will stay right here in this office till I get back."
 She promised.

But she was ill prepared for what she saw when the office door was opened half an hour later and Doctor Carpy pushed Denison ahead of him into the office. Bill's eyes were bandaged. He groped a little with his hands, while the doctor guided him to a chair.

"Here he is, Jane," announced Carpy bluntly. "He can speak for himself." She had not an instant to wait. No sooner did Denison feel himself seated in a chair than he held out his arms and said, apparently not with deep feeling, not with pained emotion, but in the most commonplace, everyday, matter-of-fact manner: "Where's my girl? Come here!"

"Bill, I Thought You Ought at Least to Have a—"

The old doctor watched Jane run timidly to Denison's side. "Bill!" she exclaimed brokenly. "Here I am!"
 "What's all this talk I hear about your quitting me, Jane?" he asked unsteadily.

"Bill, I thought you ought at least to have a—"

"Well, I've had my chance, haven't I? And this is my answer. Till death do us part! Nothing less, nothing else goes! Is that plain, girlie? I gave you a chance the other day to quit me—what was your answer?"

CHAPTER XII

Jane did not go home that afternoon. She sent Bull and the buckboard back with instructions not to come in for her until she sent word. She wrote a brief note to her father, merely saying that she had attended to his business and would be home in a few days. Van Tassel, in an impatient rage, sent Bull back with an order to Jane to come home at once or not to come home at all.

The harsh message made less impression on his daughter than he had intended; but it did bring back the answer that she would be out soon.

When the buckboard next day drew up at the ranchhouse door, Jane, alighted with a fast-beating heart.

Fortunately, when she got home, her father was out in the hills. Her welcome came from Quong; it sort of broke the ice of the home-coming. But she went to her room, got out her two old suitcases, dusted them off, laid them on her bed and, stripping the hooks of her closet and opening the drawers of her dresser, began almost furiously to pack.

While she was at this, she heard the heavy uneven steps of her father in the living room, and the next minute his huge bulk darkened the open doorway of her bedroom.

"Hello!" he snapped.
 She turned. "Hello, Father," she responded simply.

"What are you doing?"
 "Packing."

"What for?"
 "Preparing to go into town."

"What you goin' in town agin for?"
 "I've got a job in town, and I'm going there to work at it."

"What kind of a job?" he snorted.
 "I'm going to study nursing at the hospital."

"What the hell you goin' to do that for?"

"Because things have been done from here that make this place hateful to me. I couldn't stand it here any longer."

"What things you talkin' about?" She looked at him steadily. "I'm talking about burning Bill Denison's ranch house."

"What's that got to do with your quitting home?"

"Everything. Everybody's talking about that fire. Barney Rebstock has told that you paid him for setting fire to a neighbor's ranch house with men sleeping in it."

"Why, that fellow's the worst liar in Sleepy Cat. Nobody believes anything he says."

"I can tell you everybody believes it," she said, trembling.

"Do you believe it?"
 "Father, I am forced to unless you can convince me you had nothing to do with it. This wretch has had a pocketful of money."

Van Tassel regarded her with perfect poise. "Why, I did give him a little money. I'll say I've been sorry for him. I know he hates Bill Denison—a good many folks in this country's got no use for that."

"Stop!" cried Jane. "Don't say anything against Bill Denison. He saved my life!"

"—that damned, dirty, ornery rustler and thief—"

Jane's eyes blazed. She stamped her foot. "Don't you dare!" she cried. "What you're saying about him is what everyone in this country says about you."

"Yes? There's some damned mean people in this country," thundered her father. "Just look out yourself, my lady. I don't know any more about that fire than you do. If Barney Rebstock wanted to get even with Denison, that's his business, not mine. You shut your trap."

"That's not all."
 "More lies, eh?"

"McCrosen has told in town that you once tried to get him to set the house on fire and he refused to do it."

"He lies! He did do it! I gave him five hundred dollars to do it. He agreed to do it and took the money to do it. If he hired Barney Rebstock to start the fire that's his lookout! I left you here to watch things, and McCrosen has been running off my steers ever since I went to the hospital. He knows I know it. He knows I'm going to get after him. And I will," he shouted with a frightful oath.

"Now look here! I'll tell you where you got off. You're not going a step to town! I know your scheme; you're going to live with that man Denison—"

"Father!"

"Yes, I know you. You don't leave this house!"

Loading every sentence with rage and oaths, Van Tassel seized a suitcase from the bed, dashed it to the floor, stamped on it.

"Now you go to town if you dare," he roared. "And if you leave this house today, never come back—if you do I'll kick you out. Get out of my sight, before I choke you!"

She hurried from the room and from the house.

What should she do? Escape was first in her thoughts, as she hurried up the hill trail. When she could partially collect her distracted senses, she had wandered well into the hills. She threw herself on the ground and tried to think.

She never knew how long she was there. But shadows were lengthening when she rose. She was hungry. There was nothing to do but go down and get something to eat; then, if she could keep out of sight of her father, to start for town.

She walked to the house in fear. But she reached the kitchen without seeing her father. Quong gave her dinner. He told her her father had gone to the Reservation. Afraid that her father would return before she could get away, Jane started for the corral. Bull Page was fastening the gate when Jane walked up to him. "I must go to town, Bull. I want a horse."

"It's again orders, Miss Jane, to let a horse out for you. Gus is a-rarin' mad for some cause."

"I know, Bull. He's angry at me. I can't help it."

Bull scratched his head. "His orders are dead agin lettin' a horse go out."

"No matter, Bull. Never mind." She started to walk away. "What you goin' to do, Missy Jane?"

She turned with a sorry smile. "Guess I'll have to walk. Good-bye."

"Hold on! You ain't goin' to walk!" "Bull, I don't want to make trouble for you. I'll walk."

"Trouble be damned. I've seen Gus mad before—he'll get over it. I'm goin' to saddle a horse."

Jane hesitated. But, dragged out as she was by excitement and worry, she doubted whether she could make town on foot. She surrendered and climbed onto the horse he had saddled.

"Bull," she said, "why do you take all this trouble for me?"

"Why, I'd do anything in the world for you, Missy Jane. You're the one person on Gunlock that treats old Bull like a man an' not like a dog. Why, if I up 'n' just died for you, it wouldn't be too much."

"Good-bye, Bull."

"So long, Missy Jane."

A dispute with the agent on the Reservation over a cattle delivery held Van Tassel at Flambeau until late. Bull Page unsaddled and put Van Tassel's horse into the corral.

"Where's Jane's pony?" Van Tassel demanded.

"Why, I guess she's out with it, Gus," suggested Bull.

Van Tassel flared up. "Didn't I give you and everybody else orders not to let her take a horse till I gave permission?"

PAUL'S PARTING COUNSELS

LESSON TEXT—I Timothy 6:6-16; II Timothy 4:16-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. II Timothy 4:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul's Last Letter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Awaits the Great Adventure.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Passing on the Christian Torch.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Transmitting the Gospel Heritage.

The apostle Paul was an example in many things, and not the least important of these is the manner in which he was constantly on the lookout for young men who by the call and blessing of God would take up the gospel ministry. He realized that there was much to be done and that if the Lord tarried he and his co-workers would pass on, and the work must needs be carried forward by younger men.

Not only did he seek out such young men but he "followed through," giving them encouragement, instruction, and opportunities for service. How shortsighted is the church that fails God at this point, or which, for the sake of local and present usefulness, hinders young men and women from obtaining the needed training for Christian service. The fields are white unto harvest but the laborers are still few. Let us pray them out and help them on their way.

Our lesson centers around the counsels of Paul to his young friend, Timothy. Written near the end of his life, the letters are filled with all the sweet earnestness of his great soul. They present four important truths which merit the careful attention of every Christian, and even more particularly of the Christian worker.

I. The Gain of Godliness (I Tim. 6:6-8).

In a world which knows little but the urge to gain material riches we need to emphasize the fact that it is still true that a man is not profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul.

The great gain of godliness is that inner fellowship with God which brings true contentment of spirit.

II. The Snare of Riches (I Tim. 6:9-11).

The pages of human history are full of the names of those who have fallen into this trap of Satan. Sad to say, not a few of them have been Christian leaders.

Notice that it is not the money itself, or the amount of it that constitutes the danger. It is the desire or the "mind to be rich," and "the love of money" that "is a root of all evil." Hence Paul's admonition comes to each one of us to "flee these things and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." What a sermon in a dozen words!

III. The Fight of Faith (vv. 12-16).

Christianity is not only an inward grace which reflects in "godliness with contentment" and in fleeing the snare of riches, but it is a daily fighting of the good fight of faith. It is imperative that there be "a good confession" (v. 12), coupled with a keeping of God's "commandment without spot, without reproach, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The servant of Christ, in view of the coming of the One who is "the King of Kings and Lord of Lords," is to live a consistent, clean, and irreproachable life.

IV. A Divine Deliverance (II Tim. 4:16-18).

"All forsook me," says Paul. How tragic! How weak and undependable is the arm of flesh! "But the Lord stood by me." How glorious! How mighty and gracious is our God!

The follower of Christ may find himself without a human friend or supporter. Those who stood by in younger and more successful days may have disappeared. But let us remember that our trust is in God who has never failed any one of his children. "He abideth faithful, he cannot deny himself." (II Tim. 2:13).

Worship and Prayers

It is for the sake of man, not of God, that worship and prayers are required; that man may be made better—that he may be confirmed in a proper sense of his dependent state, and acquire those pious and virtuous dispositions in which his highest improvement consists.

Learning Only Good

The wish falls often on my heart, that I may learn nothing here that I cannot continue in the other world; that I may do nothing here but deeds that will bear fruit in Heaven.

—Jean Paul Richter.

Window of Hope

Eternity is the divine treasure house, and hope is the window, by means of which mortals are permitted to see, as through a glass darkly, the things which God is preparing.—Mountford.

Uncle Phil
Says:

That Is Perfection

Perfection does not consist in doing singular things; but it does consist in doing common things singularly well.

Always be sure your friends can grant the favor before you ask it; then there won't be the pain and embarrassment of refusal.

Admitting our faults is half way to correcting them; but the laziest half.

Those That Tried

Failures are facts that prove a man has at least actually tried to be successful.

The sophisticated person finds little to enjoy. Everything is old to him.

A man who knows that his hardships made the best part of his character may not want his son to have hardships.

Everyone remembers what a great man says. So much the worse for his reputation for consistency.

Don't Live for Less

Never allow yourself to live for anything less than your highest ideal. If you do, you will deteriorate.

We always feel great admiration for those clever people who can mend something when we break it.

All friendships between men are based on the fact that the two are somehow happy in each other's company.

If you want to make your friend happy instead of seeking to have him make you happy, that's the true gold.

No two men are exactly alike; and universal democracy can't overcome it.

Sum total of knowledge gained from century to century makes men wiser; and that's about all.

Floating Derelicts

Derelicts are as dangerous to navigation as submerged icebergs. As many as a thousand have been reported in the North Atlantic in a single year. Many drift great distances before they are found and sunk, the record being held, it is believed, by the Fannie E. Wolston, which—when last seen in 1893 off Savannah—had floated 7,000 miles in two and a half years.—Collier's Weekly.

The Point of View

Household Questions

Radiators and steam pipes will be less noticeable in a room if they are painted the same color of the walls or wood trim.

Parsley for potatoes and salads will keep bright and fresh in color if scalded before mincing.

French fried potatoes will be better if the sliced spuds are allowed to stand in cold water at least an hour before cooking.

When sending a book through the mail cut corners off stiff envelopes and put on book corners. Protected in this way corners will not bend.

Cane-bottomed chair seats can be tightened up by washing them in a weak solution of salt water and then drying in the open air.

Always make it a point to keep your larder supplied with about a dozen cans of soups, meats and fruits. When an unexpected guest arrives for lunch you will then be able to serve a good meal.

Potatoes used in salad should be thoroughly chilled and with sharp knife cut into half-inch dice. Add rest of ingredients and mix with fork. This will aid in preventing salad from becoming "mushy."

To keep paint fresh in uncovered cans fill them to the top with water, after stirring the paint thoroughly. When needed, pour off the water with care.

ORLAND PARK SCHOOL NEWS

High School
Everyone reported a pleasant Thanksgiving holiday, and settled down to studying with renewed vigor this week.

Monday afternoon Miss Priest entertained members of the cast in the play: "Thanks, Awfully." An enjoyable social hour was passed at the end of which refreshments were served.

Charles Dickens 'Christmas Carol' has been selected by the high school to be given for the Christmas program. Parts in the play are being distributed, and plans for music, costumes and stage production are being made. The cooperation of everyone in school is needed to make the play a success. Mr. Linden will help in many ways, chief among them, to superintend the enlarging of the stage. Miss Van Camp will assist with the music, and Miss Priest will be the general director of the play. The names of students in the entire cast will be printed in next week's issue of the paper. Sherman Knox has been chosen for the leading part of Ebenezer Scrooge.

Report cards for the second six weeks were issued Tuesday.

Marie Heiting and Mae Reish have been appointed bell monitors for the various class periods each day.

Upper Grade Room

David Jennings moved to Joliet on Tuesday. We were very sorry to have David leave us, but we wish him and his parents much joy and success in their new home.

Dorothy Arnold, Eleanor Cooper, Eleanor Knox, John Kesser, Buddy Cox, Franklin Kruspe and Martin Yunker, all in the Upper Grade room, have been neither absent nor tardy this year.

In the Upper Grade room there is much activity being directed toward Christmas gifts. The girls in their sewing class are learning new and fancy embroidery stitches to be applied on a gift. The boys are finding new patterns for projects in the woodworking shop.

Jean Doyle has been absent all week on account of a heavy cold.

Intermediate Room

While cutting fancy figures on the ice, Bobby Hewson fell and broke off a front tooth.

The Intermediate room entertained the primary room the day before Thanksgiving. A short play "The First Thanksgiving" was presented after which they served popcorn to their guests.

James Ballou was absent a week because of illness.

Bobby Estand was also absent because of illness.

Joyce Homerding's sprained thumb is very much improved and she will soon be able to write again.

Shirley Cleveland and Joyce Town are about ready to start knitting sweaters for themselves, having nearly completed their practice work.

The following is a theme written for General Science by Lila Enders.

WEATHER AND CLIMATE
Finding out how to measure accurately the temperature and air pressure, the knowledge of the weather and climate and the conditions which influence them is a part of the science termed meteorology, the study of the atmosphere.

For measuring devices scientists have many delicate instruments. They measure the temperature of a certain area by the use of a thermometer, this being a glass tube with a tiny bore thru the center, at the bottom of which is a large bulb, where the mercury or substance used in it goes when the temperature falls. With the aid of these thermometers, records of temperature at all times and all parts of the country are accurately kept.

Radiant Energy is sent from the sun to the earth. The temperature of the air depends upon the earth's surface. Dark dull surfaces, such as soil absorb radiant energy very quickly and change it to radiant heat if the rays of the sun strike something shiny or clear, as water the rays are reflected and the water remains cool, also the air around it. The air above the soil which was warmed become immediately heated.

If a material is partly transparent like water, the rays will go some distance into the water before it is all changed to heat. Some materials have a large capacity for heat and still others have a small one. For instance, water has a greater capacity for heat than any other common material, such as rock or soil. Therefore we say the two main factors which determine the differences in temperature of the earth's surfaces depend upon their power to absorb heat and in the amount of heat actually required to warm them.

Next we must consider the conditions which determine the amount and form of rainfall. The air in our school room, outside and the whole ocean of air contains a certain amount of water or water vapor. Water is continually evaporating from the surface of the earth. More of this water vapor can be held in warm than in cold air. The warm air being lighter is pushed up by the cool air. As the warm air rises, it is cooled and sometimes is cooled below the saturation point, the point where the air has all the water it can hold. The air going higher and higher, finally gets so cold that it must drop its water vapor. The vapor collects and forms drops of rain which falls to the earth.

In some way which scientists do not fully understand, the rain clouds become heavily charged with electricity. Great flashes of it go from one cloud to another or from a cloud to the ground. As the flashes pass thru the air, the sudden expansion from the terrific heat causes powerful sound waves which are heard as crashes of thunder.

Sometimes in summer, rain drops are carried up further by violent current of air, thus carrying the drops thru freezing layers of air; being frozen they fall to the ground as sleet or hail.

Sometimes under conditions similar to those that produce thunder storms, tornadoes are formed. The uprushing currents of air take on a whirling motion which is believed to reach a speed four to five hundred miles per. The whirling motions tends to throw the air outward and leave a partial vacuum at its center. The lowered pressure cools the air there and causes water-vapor to condense into a peculiar funnel shaped cloud. This funnel drags along the ground and reins anything it comes in contact with.

The United States is in a belt of prevailing westernlies. That is one of the general belts of wind. In this great region large areas of high pressure and other large areas of low pressure develop and move gradually in an easterly direction. Each pressure area brings on a different kind of weather.

In a "high" the air is cool and dry. It's air is moving in all directions from the center.

This condition usually as a result brings on clear and cool weather.

In a "low" the air is warm and humid. This air is forced upward. In this region the weather is warm, cloudy, low pressure and rising air.

No conditions of nature affect you more than the weather and climate of the region in which you live. Even at very early times this great influence determined man's dwelling place, his activities and mode of living. The kind of plants and animals that exist, the kind of food you eat, the clothes you wear, the type of house you live in, the work you do, the way you travel, the games you play, in fact everything you do depends upon the weather and upon the climate of the region in which you live.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, on Sunday, November 29.

The Golden Text was, "It is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve" (Matthew 4:10).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "When thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations. There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or a charmer, or a consulter of with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer...For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord" (Deuteronomy 18:9-12).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Truth casts out all evils and materialistic methods with the actual spiritual law,—the law which gives sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, voice to the dumb, feet to the lame. If Christian Science dishonors human belief, it honors spiritual understanding; and the one Mind only is entitled to honor" (p. 183).

1937 Chevrolet In Big Demand

The average daily deliveries of Chevrolet's new 1937 cars since the announcement of the new models November 7 have been more than double those of a year ago, according to reports reaching the Detroit offices of the company.

During the first several days after the announcement, deliveries reached approximately 11,000 a day, company officials revealed, as compared to around 4,600 a day following last year's announcement.

More than 65,000 cars had been placed in the hands of buyers within a few days after the public first saw the new models, and an additional 100,000 orders had been placed with the 10,000 Chevrolet dealers in the field, officials said.

Production is being stepped up to 6,000 cars a day in an effort to satisfy the sweeping public demand.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Green of Lockport have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their oldest daughter, Miss Florence to Owen Ott of Homer. The wedding will be solemnized at the Green residence on Saturday afternoon, December 5th before members of the immediate families. Rev. H. R. Jay, will perform the marriage ceremony. The young people contemplate a short honeymoon with relatives in Iowa.

Saturday night, a large crowd of people, both young and old gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Ott and presented Miss Florence Green and Owen Ott with a miscellaneous shower. The gifts were many and beautiful as well as useful.

The evening was spent in guessing contests. In the bird guessing contest, Miss Eloise Welter won the prize; in the telegram contest, Mrs. Henry Rodgers won and in the word building test Miss Margaret Boyce scored highest. These prizes were in turn presented to the bride elect.

Later a picnic lunch was enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Welter and the latter's mother, Mrs. Clara Kesser, enjoyed Thanksgiving dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Healt in Orland.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Weis and daughter Marilyn of Westmont, were dinner guests Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Weis.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Paddock, and daughters enjoyed Thanksgiving dinner at the home of the formers' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Paddock in Lockport.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCumber and daughters of Joliet and Mr. and Mrs. Adam Bodenschatz of Lemont were entertained at the home of Harlow Jungles Thursday evening.

Tuesday being open house at the Lutheran Orphanage in Joliet, Mrs. Fred Paddock and son Jerome spent a portion of the day there. The Wayside Workers Circle of Kings Daughters of which Mrs. Paddock is president, has been sewing for the orphanage so Mrs. Paddock also delivered the packages then.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Waldvogel and son enjoyed Thanksgiving dinner at the John Waldvogel home on Maple Road.

Mrs. Otto Konow and George Bump attended the services and enjoyed dinner at the Methodist church in Lemont Sunday, when Dr. Holland and Ralph Waldo Emerson of Chicago conducted the services.

Word has been received that Mrs. Palmer Paulson the former Miss Laura Austin passed away at a hospital in San Gabriel, Calif., after a short illness. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband and two children. Funeral services were held Saturday at one o'clock from her home in San Gabriel.

Dr. H. H. Haggard, superintendent of the Joliet High School will give an address at the Homer Congregational church next Sunday evening, Dec. 6th. Everyone is urged to come and fill the church pews, also to hear a very good address.

The Dramatic Club will present a program of local vaudeville sketches at the Homer church on Friday night December 4th. There will be a door charge. Mrs. Frank Hartman and Miss Lois Ott are the committee in charge.

A family dinner was held Thanksgiving Day at the home of Mrs. Bell Storm on Maple Road. The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Rowley and daughters Betty and Marie Ott and her children, Edward, Elaine and Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kopelman and family Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Cagwin and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rodgers, Miss Margaret Welter, Miss Irene Storm, Bert Barton and Owen Storm.

The Goodings Grove Hall Company will sponsor a prize waltz dance on Saturday night, December 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith and family and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smith of Orland Park visited at the John Tasch home in Maywood.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Homerd of Lemont were dinner guests on Thanksgiving in the Matt Homerd home.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Braasch and daughter Shirley and Mr. and Mrs. Matt Wagner were dinner guests on Thursday in the Heatherwick home in Orland.

Shirley Jungles has been detained from her school duties by illness. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jungles have also been sick.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ingersoll, Sr., entertained at Thanksgiving dinner. The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bentley and daughters, Miss Lois and Miss Dorothy and Mr. and

NEW LENOX

Around the Town

LOST—A pair of Ear-rings in a certain boy's pockets. Watch out E. S. if D. M. finds out you've got A. W. ear-rings, there'll be war in camp.

People are wondering who the boy was that ran off with the party (Red's girl friend) from the party last Wednesday night. Anybody know?

"Is it True?" what they say about B. W. getting married this month? Some class Ma and Pa, sporting a new Chevy. This landslide election must have slid your way.

Alyce wants to know if anyone would be interested in her new diet. One hot dog—one cup coffee and one piece cocoanut cream pie ala-mode—to be taken at 3 a. m. and especially after all parties.

We hear H. S. is quite taken up with this live baby to be given away at St. Jude's card party, Tuesday, December 8, at the school gymnasium.

L. C. the town heart-breaker, made up with the old boy friend Saturday night and ditched her other date. Poor O. R. H. looked all over for her but in vain. "O" is from Texas, but is quite taken up with his work in Manhattan since he met L.

We heard that W. S. and his new gal I. V. from Manhattan are hitting it off fine. Watch the papers folks.

E. M. and D. R. certainly must be getting serious, they even go to church together now. Looks bad.

Anyone interested in the "dairy" or "cattle" business—talk it over with E. S. and B. T. if you really want to learn something about it. But don't pretend to know more than they—ever—'cause that means argument.

B. Mc always claimed variety was the spice of life, but since this new boy moved to town she's really wondering. We wonder too.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE DANGER SIGNAL

THERE was a great deal of uneasiness in the big barn where the Robber Rats lived. Would Billy Mink return, or had he just made a chance visit and gone somewhere else? The gray old leader of the rats felt sure that Billy would return. He was too anxious to eat, and, you know, when a rat's appetite fails he must be very much disturbed indeed.

But the younger rats thought the gray old leader needlessly frightened, and they went about their business of stealing food and gnawing holes wherever there seemed a chance of finding a new food supply, just as if nothing had happened. However, each hole which led into the barn was continually watched by sharp eyes. Those rats did not intend to be taken by surprise a second time.

Rats prefer the hours of darkness. They hate the light of day. Perhaps that is because their deeds are deeds of darkness. So, when daylight came most of the rats returned to their beds to sleep. Only underneath the barn where it was dark did any of them continue to run about seeking what mischief they might get into.

But the wise, gray old leader saw to it that a watch was kept on each hole just the same as during the night. He didn't think Billy Mink would come in the day time, but he was wise enough to know that Billy Mink is forever doing the unexpected. He suspected that Billy would take great pains not to let the farmer who owned that barn know that he was anywhere about. "He'll probably sleep all day," thought the gray old leader, "but just as soon as it begins to get dark he'll be back here. I just feel it in my bones."

But it wasn't dark when there suddenly sounded the danger signal from one of the watchers. In fact, it was broad daylight, the very middle of the day. You see, daylight and darkness are all one to Billy Mink. He sleeps whenever he feels sleepy regardless of whether it be night or day. At all other times he is very wide awake indeed. It happened that Billy had awakened just about noon that day and as is usual with him after a nap he was hungry. If he had been a rat instead of a mink he might have remained under the woodpile until darkness came. But Billy is very sure of his ability to take care of himself. He first made sure that no one was about. Then he slipped out from under that pile of wood, and a minute later he was under the barn. Then it was that the danger signal was sounded by the rat who was watching the hole through which Billy entered. It was at once passed on from rat to rat until every one in the barn knew that their enemy had returned.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

FOOD FOR THE GROWING CHILD

IT is gratifying to learn that the growing child may eat almost everything that the older members of the family eat, if the food is simple, well-prepared and nutritious. For a simple dessert that the whole family may eat with impunity, try baked or steamed custards. Prepare them by using two eggs to a pint of milk, a pinch of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, or honey and if all the teeth are good for grinding, add a tablespoonful of freshly-grated coconut for the top of each custard. Sprinkle with cinnamon or nutmeg and chill before serving. To cook, set the custard cups in a pan of water—not too deep to boil up and into the cups—and cook until just firm enough to be like heavy cream. Test with a knife in the center of each; if it comes out clean the custard is ready to remove from the heat. Take out of the water and place in cold water to chill.

We are allowed to give even the small child who has his grinding teeth fresh shredded cabbage as well as grated carrot. Bananas when well ripened are just as important as bread and carrots in the diet.

Cabbage with spaghetti is a different way of serving that good vegetable. To four cupfuls of shredded cabbage take one and one-half cupfuls of broken spaghetti, cook in boiling salted water until tender, then drain. Stir over the fire four tablespoonfuls of butter or any sweet fat, add four tablespoonfuls of flour, blend well and add two cupfuls of milk; cook until smooth, season with salt to taste, adding a few dashes of cayenne and a cupful of snappy grated cheese. Arrange the cabbage and spaghetti in layers, covering with the sauce. Top with soft buttered crumbs and bake twenty to thirty minutes. Serve from the baking dish with a wreath of parsley around the dish.

Before very long the hand will be opened to you, and then you will understand why so much attention has been given to fundamentals. Mastery of them leads to the knowledge possessed by the world's most celebrated palmists. You will find yourself duplicating to a surprising degree their ability to interpret the meanings of the mysterious groupings of lines with which destiny has written its undeniable records within the hands of every one.

The thumb is the most significant of all the individual fundamental elements. It discloses with almost incredible accuracy its owner's temperament; whether he or she is hot or cool headed, affectionate or cold, extravagant or thrifty, kind or cruel, vacillating or methodical, weak-willed or strong, foresighted or ruled by impulse.

There Are Some Songs

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THERE are some songs that search the heart, The mists of memory explore, And though we dwell a world apart, And though we meant to meet no more, I see you standing at the door, I feel your presence in the room, As one white star breaks through the gloom When day is o'er.

There are some songs that someone wrote, Who knew it not, for you and me, For I have heard one perfect note, Half agony, half ecstasy, And then your face again I see, Your voice I hear from long ago, The well-remembered, though I know It cannot be.

There are some songs not born of men, Whatever name they seem to bear, Songs written with an angel's pen Sweeter than men would ever dare:

Some angel touched some poet's hair, Taught some musician more than art—

There are some songs that search the heart, And find you there.

Invents New Motor

Harry B. Miller, graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles and now studying for his master's degree, demonstrates a new rotary motor he has developed. It is run by steam or compressed air, and, so Miller says, is practically frictionless. The motor, which acts both as propellant and brake, is to be placed on the front wheel of automobiles.

These Two Are "Circus Pals"

"Circus Pals" by Robert J. Sacks of Chicago is one of the pictures at the National Salon of Photography in the Vanderbilt gallery of the American Fine Arts society in New York. The exhibition, which is the first national salon of the Oval Table society after many years of one-man shows, included 274 pictorial prints and 77 technical prints, selected from 2,070 pictures submitted by the best photographers of America

Simple But Smart Models

MATRON, maid, or tiny miss—your attention please. For assembled here are three lovely frocks to brighten your wardrobes. All are designed to be made at home, quickly and inexpensively, and each is accompanied by a step-by-step instruction chart which makes sewing a real pleasure and recreation.

The lovely and graceful daytime or afternoon frock, Pattern 1949, features a novel yet simple yoke and collar treatment, a clever swing skirt, and youthful sleeves, long or short. Chic and stylish, yet as simple as can be, it will make up beautifully in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 (30 to 38 bust measure), and size 14, with short sleeves, requires just 3½ yards of 39 inch material.

The comely morning frock which steals the center, Pattern 1973, is available in a wide range of sizes and takes top honors for comfort and versatility. Requiring just five simple pieces including the belt, it goes together like a charm, to fit perfectly and make your morning chores so much lighter. The pointed yoke is slimming, the set-in sleeves are free and open, and the skirt is dart fitted at the waist. As easy to make as to wear, this pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Send for it today. Size 38 requires just 3½ yards of 35 inch fabric, dimity or percale or gingham or seersucker.

The tempting model for tiny tots, Pattern 1944, is likewise utterly simple to make, yet as cunning as can be. Good for party or for play, it is a pattern you can cut twice and save for future use in any of a wide range of fabrics. The tiny puff sleeves are cut in one with the shoulder with just two simple pieces for the front and back of the dress. The size range—six months, one, two and three years. The one year size requires 1½ yards of 36 inch material, and if you wish you can make the pockets, cuffs and facings in contrast.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents in coins for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 367 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill. Patterns 15 cents (in coins) each.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Harvey Hays, eighty-five, a resident of Metcalf for sixty years, died at his home.

James Davey, eighty-three years old, was gored to death by a bull on his farm, near Lasant, LaSalle county.

Joe Cambron, twenty-one, of Neponset, died of injuries received when his motorcycle collided head on with an automobile.

William Franke, fifty-three, unemployed embalmer, called an undertaker and doctor to his home in East St. Louis, and then shot himself.

James O'Neal, former mayor of Fairfield, was acquitted by a jury in the Circuit court of embezzlement charges following an alleged shortage of his accounts while he was a township supervisor.

Mount Carroll has only one civil war veteran left following the death of Sol Lehr, eighty-nine, who fought in several engagements in Georgia. The lone veteran is Capt. W. H. Wilkey, ninety-seven.

Dorothy Nelson, fourteen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Nelson of Mokena, was killed when she walked in front of the Chicago bound Century of Progress C. & E. I. train at the depot.

Blake C. Grover, sixty, city clerk of Dixon since 1907, died at his home. He spent his spare time calling upon and aiding the sick in the city. He never failed to make daily calls at the various hospitals.

Alfred H. Jonas, thirty-five years old, of Grays Lake was burned to death and two Chicago men were injured seriously in a head-on collision of two automobiles two and a half miles south of Grays Lake. The injured are Gus Birn, fifty-seven years old, and Harry W. Miller, fifty-four.

Hazel Kohnitz, a student at the Graham school, Chicago, has been declared winner for Illinois in the eleventh national safety essay contest. In the national safety lesson contest open to elementary school teachers first honors for Illinois went to Miss Mary H. Zimmerman of the Morris school.

The board of governors of the Lake County Bar association, at a meeting in Waukegan, voted to give free legal assistance to qualified poor people seeking advice. This aid has heretofore been given by the state's attorney's office. The burden has become too great recently for that office, it was explained.

Governor Horner's special board of inquiry into prison conditions will demand a sweeping shakeup of the state's prison system and the conduct of every penal institution, it was revealed, following a meeting of the board in Chicago. The board's report will be made "not later than January," the members pledged.

Attorney General Kerner announced that as a result of conferences between Illinois and Indiana health authorities the Indiana officials have promised to take legal steps, soon after the first of the year, to stop pollution of Chicago's water supply by industrial and domestic sewage from Indiana factories and municipalities.

Free anti-rabies serum will hereafter be provided by the state to all persons in need of it without requiring certificates of poverty. This was announced by Joseph L. Moss, director of the Cook county bureau of public welfare, who said Dr. Frank Jirka, director of the state department of public health, had placed the serum on the state's free list.

Cracksmen looted the Brookfield postoffice of $11,000 cash and stamps after cutting their way into the safe with an acetylene torch. The safe blowers, believed to be a gang of experts, carted their heavy equipment and a screen to shield their operations into the building some time between midnight and 6:30 a. m. They departed leaving no clues except a pail of water, used, it is believed, to cool the steel of the safe door during the cutting operations.

The LaGrange Citizen won first prize among members of the Illinois Press association for both the best editorial and best advertisement of 1936, the University of Illinois school of journalism committee announced at the seventy-first annual press meeting in Champaign. The Tri-County Press, Polo, was second and the Mendon Dispatch Times and West Frankfort American tied for third in the editorial contest. The Crystal Lake Herald was second and the Nashville Journal third in the best advertisement award. Other winners included the following: Best news article, 1936, Evanston News Index, first; LaGrange Citizen, second; Macomb Daily Journal, third. Best feature story, 1936, Wood River Journal, first; Pike County Republican, Jerseyville, second; Hillsboro Journal, third.

After eight weeks of balloting three co-eds were named as the most popular of the University of Illinois campus in a contest sponsored by Illinois Union. The three elected are Roberta Baldwin, Chicago; Nell Gere, Alton, and Kay Marsh, Belleville.

Appointment of John Palmquist of Galesburg to be a state highway patrolman out of the Rock Island district was announced by State Police Chief Walter Williams. Palmquist replaces K. J. Greene also of Galesburg, who resigned to return to a railroad position.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington. — Many observers around Washington lately have noticed something of a change in President Roosevelt's attitude since the election which so overwhelmingly returned him to office. From most any standpoint you assume, you will note, I believe, a more critical attitude on the part of the President concerning the schemes advanced by his advisers. He is apparently examining the suggestions, the proposals and programs laid before him much more cautiously and carefully than was his record during the past three years.

It is yet too early to catalog this attitude as a change on Mr. Roosevelt's part but surely it is noticeable. If he continues it, it is all to the good for the country. If he continues it, it cannot fail to mean better administration, better legislation, sounder national policies. It necessarily must mean as well, that there will be fewer of the half-baked ideas, plans which the President had not considered fully, programs he had not thought through. One of the important indicators of this changed attitude on the part of Mr. Roosevelt comes in the form of an announcement in which Mr. Roosevelt named a committee of outstanding agricultural authorities and citizens whose job is to prepare a long-term program for alleviation of the farm tenant problem, if not its complete eradication. Secretary Wallace will head this committee which is to report early in February and the appointment of Mr. Wallace to this job incidentally seems to assure his retention as head of the Department of Agriculture—and there had been some question whether he would remain.

Of course, the farm tenant problem long has been a cancerous growth on American agriculture. It has been spreading. Previously, I have reported in these columns how official figures disclosed an increasing number of farms operated by tenants and owned by absentee landlords. It has been a problem for some years and seems to be growing more acute. Hence, the President's move would seem to mean that the federal government is going to put its hand to the oar and try, at least, to do something about it.

Now, it may mean that the federal government will create another billion dollar government-owned corporation or it may mean subsidies or any one of a number of other federal aids. I do not want to prejudge it, however, because certainly the President is to be commended in approaching the problem in a sensible way, namely, the creation of a committee to give the question a thoroughgoing analysis before legislation to alleviate the condition is proposed.

That is what makes it so significant. A year or two or three ago, some braintruster sitting in a cobwebby office would have suddenly had a thought about the "renters" and other types of farm tenants; he would have felt very sorry for them and would have determined in his own mind that they must be made the beneficiaries of "the more abundant life" right quickly. He would have sought and obtained an appointment with the President; would have related the beautiful picture he had conceived in his own limited mentality and, in all probability, Mr. Roosevelt would have shouted, "fine, fine."

The next thing that would have happened would have been the drafting of a piece of legislation for submission to congress. It would have gone to Capitol Hill with the stamp of administration approval and all of the automations of the house and senate who owed their positions to Roosevelt blessings, would have voted for it. It would have become law without serious debate and, as in most cases, without most of the representatives and senators having understood what it was all about. The results of such legislation are beginning to show and it is going to be necessary to remake a great deal of it. The trouble was that these theorists and impractical men never were able to see more than one narrow phase of the problem with which they were dealing and Mr. Roosevelt did not take the time to find out for himself what all of the factors were.

It is quite evident, therefore, that one thing the New Deal sadly needs is more co-ordination among its own people. I referred above to the necessity for co-ordination among governmental departments as to policies and that leads into the long-time need for actual reorganization of the physical structure known as the federal government. There are certain signs emerging from the seething now occurring, as is usual, in advance of a congressional session that indicate President Roosevelt may be making a definite move towards this much needed reorganization.

It is highly important that it be done. I think everyone agrees with that statement. Mr. Roosevelt is in a position to do it. He is one of the few Presidents of recent years who has been in a position to do it. He is in that position because of the tremendous majority his party possesses in house and senate and I think it can be said unequivocally, if Mr. Roosevelt cannot do it or does not do it, it never will be done.

It goes without saying that there are scores of unnecessary agencies now in existence, most of them the children of the New Deal. There is overlapping; there is conflict of jurisdiction and there is a superabundance of ideas from every source that affect or influence operations of other agencies. It is a tangled skein and the untangling is going to be a difficult job. The whole setup is shot through with politics and politicians and to decapitate political patronage is a man-sized job. The job now may be made even worse in this regard by the fact that never in history have there been so many shades of opinion in congress. The natural result of this sort of thing is that the various groups of blocs insist on carrying out particular pet schemes and those pet schemes nearly always mean a new governmental bureau, commission or what have you.

As far as present conditions have developed, none can foretell exactly what Mr. Roosevelt has in mind concerning the new government structure. It goes without saying, of course, that the major departments, each headed by a cabinet officer, will constitute the basic framework of whatever co-ordination or consolidation Mr. Roosevelt eventually proposes. But it is outside of this framework where the real co-ordination is needed. It is among the countless alphabetical soup agencies that the pruning knife and the axe must be wielded with utter abandon. A lot of needless and, in many cases, irresponsible government policies are worked out here. It is among these agencies as well where waste in the form of reckless spending and badly conceived programs has taken place to the greatest extent under the Roosevelt administration.

Such co-ordination and consolidation as the President attempts, therefore, can accomplish a very great deal in the way of budgetary reforms and relief for the taxpayers if the job is undertaken seriously. Indeed, as the situation now shapes up, elimination of about 50 per cent of these so-called emergency agencies and complete eradication of their parasitic policies constitute an important approach to a balancing of the Treasury budget.

Since this is a fact, it must be recognized that the proposed consolidation movement has obstacles outside of political patronage. Politicians enjoy spending money and when they see various of their pet bureaus or commissions going the way of all flesh, they naturally will be frightened and it will take all of the strength Mr. Roosevelt possesses to keep them in line when they realize that money is being taken out from under their very noses. Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt can reorganize the government. He has 329 Democratic representatives in the house and 75 Democratic senators. Against this legislative strength of the party in power are 89 Republican representatives and 17 Republican senators, minus three or four senators who wear the Republican label but who are New Dealers at heart.

If Mr. Roosevelt is serious about this government reorganization and if he wants to force it through, I have no doubt at all that he can gain public support for his program. I have no doubt at all that if he were to go on the radio and deliver an address about the plan, there would be such a deluge of mail to representatives and senators from their constituents that they would not dare oppose the scheme. There would be more than one reason for support of the President in this activity. Next to the fact that people out through the country generally hate bureaucrats and red tape in their government, the important reason for the support which Mr. Roosevelt surely could have would come from the taxpayers who are beginning to realize what the federal government is costing them. That is one job that the Republicans did in their campaign to elect Governor Landon of Kansas. They made the country tax conscious and it is an influence that is going to rise up and haunt the New Deal administration and members of congress for some months to come.

As a conclusion, then, it seems to me that Mr. Roosevelt has prepared a test for himself whether he conceived it on that basis or otherwise. Unless he drives through a serious consolidation and elimination of needless agencies, many doubts are going to arise as to his sincerity.

Destroyed Indian Population
The prehistoric Indian population of northern Arizona was destroyed by "tenement" conditions nearly 1,000 years ago. Tracing the habits of the Indian population, an authority said that from the time they moved from single-family pit houses to multi-family apartment houses, or pueblos, similar to modern tenements, the population of these tribes dropped from 23,000 to 2,000.

"The Man Who O-O"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History
BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

CONVENTION "demonstrations"—those amazing exhibitions of hysterical enthusiasm, usually manufactured rather than spontaneous—had their origin in the Republican convention of 1860 in Chicago.

The two leading candidates were William H. Seward of New York and Abraham Lincoln of Illinois. The New York delegation brought along a prize fighter named Tom Hyer and a band which marched about the streets playing martial music.

To match these noise-makers, supporters of "Old Abe" hired a Chicagoan "whose shout could be heard above the most violent tempest on Lake Michigan" and a leather-lunged Dr. Ames, who, though a Democrat, also consented to whoop it up for Lincoln. But the real "blow-off" came when Lincoln was nominated on the fourth ballot. An eye-witness has described the scene as follows:

"The immense multitude rose, and gave round after round of applause; ten thousand voices swelled into a roar so deafening that, for several minutes, every attempt to restore order was hopelessly vain. . . . A man appeared in the hall bringing a large painting of Mr. Lincoln. The cannon sent forth roar after roar in quick succession. Delegates tore up the sticks and boards bearing the names of several states, and waved them aloft over their heads, and the vast multitude before the platform were waving hats and handkerchiefs."

Another chapter in convention "demonstrations" was added by the Republican convention, also in Chicago, in 1880. Roscoe Conkling of New York led the forces that had determined to nominate Grant for a third term. At the first mention of Grant's name, a demonstration began which lasted nearly half an hour. Conkling, noted for his "aristocratic coldness," unbent enough to stimulate enthusiasm in the galleries and among the delegates by waving his handkerchief. Then Robert G. Ingersoll started wave after wave of frantic cheering when he grabbed a woman's red shawl and waved it aloft.

Men tore off their coats and used them for flags. Then the Grant delegates seized the standards of their states and started a parade around the hall—thus starting a custom which has been perpetuated to this day.

KEYNOTERS
HOW many of us recall the keynote speech of Senator Steiwer at the Republican national convention in Cleveland last year? Or that of Senator Barkley at the Philadelphia gathering of Democrats?

The answers to that one fortify the fact that keynote speeches fade rapidly, then die as completely as an ancient mackerel. The only one which persevered through a campaign was delivered at the Democratic convention of 1916 and later events made a farce out of it.

That keynote was delivered in favor of Woodrow Wilson; the man who voiced it was Martin H. Glynn of New York.

Like the "Three Long Years" which Republicans emphasized in 1936, Glynn's keynote beat the tomtoms for Wilson's achievements in avoiding war in 1914, 1915 and 1916, ending each recital with the assertion: "But we didn't go to war."

Seizing upon the then catchy phrase, which set convention delegates on their ears, the Democratic national committee made the race on the slogan of: "He kept us out of war." It barely lasted to re-elect Wilson, for two months after beginning his second term the United States was in the war.

Success of a keynote in this particular instance was made at least partially possible by the pussyfooting tactics of the rival party. They didn't want to discuss the war. But the American voters were talking about nothing else!

One other keynote has found a place in our permanent political history. It was delivered by imposing Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana at the Bull Moose convention of 1912 which brought Theodore Roosevelt back into the spotlight. Said Beveridge: "The people's government has been usurped by the invisible government, and the people's government must be given back to the people again."

Even today, with history recording a Bull Moose defeat, there is something about this well-turned phrase which accounts for the perpetuity which has fallen to it.

Tinley Park Legion Aux. Unit

MRS. VIOLA L. CARR
Publicity Chairman

The Tinley Park Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary held their regular meeting in the P. T. A. room of the school, Nov. 27. One half membership present.

Rehabilitation chairman, Mrs. Francis Rowden with her committee of mesdames, Wannamaker, Nelson, Cushman, Ceithamel, Schultz, delivered cakes, cookies, jello and jelly with other food to Oak Forest hospital. Clean second hand clothing, coats, suits, shoes, underwear, socks, shirts were also delivered to the boys. The cup cakes and jello were given the 11 T. B. boys there.

Although 18 years have passed since the war, the number of disabled veterans is increasing rather than decreasing. Injuries and illness not considered serious at the time or in the first years after the war have developed with age until disability. T. B., a major disease.

On November 18 and 25 Mrs. Rowden did service work at Hine's hospital. She brought back a beautiful hand made knitting bag, made by one of the boys which was awarded Mrs. Marge West, the lucky winner. $2.05 was added to the Hospitalized Veterans Fund from the bag.

Plans for our Annual Christmas Eve Party for the Orland boys are about completed, Mrs. Rowden states.

Child Welfare chairman Mrs. Ceithamel delivered a thanksgiving basket to a local family in need. Local needy families will also be taken care of Christmas. The needy children of veterans are increasing steadily as death and disability take away the father's support. 402,217 children were assisted and $2,570,607.02 expended in this work last year, the report from National headquarters.

Community Service chairman, Mrs. Murphy, and her committee will wrap Christmas bundles at the Times building Chicago and also will investigate conditions surrounding local needy families, reported to Auxiliary. Community service includes betterment of conditions for all children and is not confined to children of veterans. This chairman and her committee cooperates with other organizations and agencies giving assistance to meet the problem of the under privileged child.

Membership chairman, Mamie Brandau extends the invitation to all eligible wives, mothers, sisters and daughters to join with us and extend a helping hand.

Trudie Swisher and her juniors continue from here with their very entertaining program.

Dolores Ward sang and played "The Little Brook."

Mildred Flannery recited the "Thanksgiving Day Again."

Hele n Carr recited "A Thanksgiving Prayer."

Dolores Ward in costume sang: "I Like to Take My Mamma's Clothes" and performed beautifully.

Blanche Mary Carr played a violin solo: "Songs My Mother Taught Me," with her mother assisting at the piano.

Ruth Seithhamel recited our preamble.

A group song came next with Trudie Swisher at the piano and last "Happy Birthday" was sung to Grandma Brandau.

These juniors are working very hard to reimburse their fund and are awarding a plate to some lucky person in the near future. Their money as ours will be used for service to others.

The Past Presidents will remember an old lady at Oak Forest hospital by presenting her on Christmas with stockings.

Mrs. Viola Carr, Fidac Chairman, explained how Fidac is composed of 63 associations of ex-service men of the World War grouped in 11 of the Allied Countries which are Belgium, United States, France, Great Britain, Italy, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Yugo Slavia, Czechoslovakia and Greece, the latest country to join. The American Legion Auxiliary has nearly 4,000 women members of Fidac. We as Auxiliary members automatically become members of Fidac. In the near future the "Fidac Review" will be on file with the Fidac chairman for the benefit of all members wishing to better understand its purpose.

Addresses of Fidac children from foreign countries will also be available to those juniors wishing to correspond. Here will be a chance for stamp collecting among the juniors.

Next meeting is December 11. All members and eligibles please come.

After the close of the meeting, Bunco was enjoyed, prizes awarded and home-made candy served. Mrs. Ruth Frietag was hostess.

District meeting American Legion Auxiliary at Harvey, December 8.

Myrtle Weber's Luncheon will be Saturday, December 5. Further information on these dates, call Mrs. Frietag.

Tinley Garden Club News

SLEEP COMES TO THE GARDEN
I stood a moment at each bed,
One last fond look to take,
I tiptoed 'round with gentle tread,
Lest startled they should wake.

Against the bitter winds that blow,
When storms at night begin,
I thought before I turned to go,
To tuck the covers in.

I tidied up the place a bit,
And as I came away—
Or did I just imagine it?
Their prayers I heard them say.

Now for another Spring I wait
And watchful vigil keep,
For when I closed my garden gate
The flowers were fast asleep.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THERE'S nothing funnier to a farmer than a city guy that tries to farm. The best joke in any farm neighborhood is the latest story anybody has to tell about some city fellow that don't know how to hitch up a horse or start a tractor going.

Down in North Carolina they tell about a real smart town woman that had a lot of dough and decided she was going to do some fancy poultry farming. She was investigating around the neighborhood where she expected to start her farm. She was trying to get a little information on the sly, too. She asked a farmer how he could tell when it was time to gather the eggs, and how he knew where to look for them.

"Well," says the farmer, "I reckon that ain't so much trouble. You hear that hen out there in the weeds? She's cackling. That means she's laid an egg out there, and my daughter's starting out right now to find it."

"Huh!" says the town lady. "I guess I'll have it arranged much better on my poultry farm. I could never understand such hen as yours. I'm going to have mine crossed with parrot blood, so that they will come in and tell me when and where they lay their eggs."

Apricots, Peaches From China
Apricots and peaches both originally came from China.

The Tinley Park Garden club met at the home of Mrs. Selma Duff of Blue Island on Thursday, Nov. 19, with an attendance of 22 members. After the regular business meeting an essay: "Gods Garden" was read by Mrs. Selma Duff. Mrs. Rodgers also read an article about the Swanee River.

The Garden club will start a course of study in the near future according to the plans of our Program chairman and her committee. Delicious cake, cookies, tea and coffee was served by the hostess, also nuts and candy.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. Böeyer on Thursday, Dec. 17th.

Mrs. John Funk, Flower Guild chairman asks that articles for Christmas for the poor children be brought to her on or before Dec. 16. Articles such as scrap-books, toys, candy, games, dolls, jacks, jellies, fruit, nuts, etc., may be given. Others beside Garden club members may donate. Anything is welcome.

New County Officers To Be Installed Monday

All the recently elected Democratic county officers of Will County will be installed in their new offices Monday morning, December 7th. The officers to be installed are the circuit court clerk, recorder, auditor. The only Republican to be installed is James Burke, the state's attorney. The Democrats now have full control of the courthouse with the exception of one or two offices.

Crossbow Used in China

The crossbow is the regular weapon of some aboriginal tribes in China, as well as being a weapon often kept around the house by city dwellers to scare burglars.
